

Correct the run-on sentences in the following paragraph.

Ms. Rossi was a very busy lawyer therefore her work left her little time to exercise her dog Sonny, who was getting fat and sluggish. Something had to be done. A brilliant idea struck her mind. Since Sonny raced around the apartment whenever the phone rang, she would dial her number several times a day. As she did this one afternoon, the receiver clicked, she heard strange noises at the other end. She called Sonny's name there were several sharp yips. She let her office friends listen, they marveled at what they heard. After this had continued for several days, she went home early one day, saying that she had a headache. She asked the telephone operator to ring her number. A moment later she heard a key in the door, it was the superintendant entering her apartment. Ms. Rossi hid behind a drape. The manager picked up the receiver, then he yipped and barked. He confessed that Ms. Rossi's friends at the office had urged him to play this trick on her.
